Zentner and Zentner is pleased to announce our name change to Zentner Planning and Ecology to better reflect our work, knowledge, and expertise. In conjunction with this change, long-time Zentner and Zentner partners, Sean Micallef and Brian Davis have now assumed management responsibility for the firm.

Brian Davis, Managing Partner: Brian Davis has a long background in small business management, entrepreneurship and environmental studies, including over 20 years of experience as the controller of Zentner and Zentner. He has also consulted with numerous environmental and engineering firms on emerging markets, small business and minority business enterprises. With his expertise in both business and the environment, he specializes in marketing and other business requirements for small firms in the environmental consulting field.

Sean Micallef, Partner-Chief Ecologist: Sean Micallef has more than 20 years of experience in all aspects of environmental consulting. He specializes in project management for complex projects involving multiple permits, federal and state wetland and species permitting, and ecological fieldwork residential, industrial, energy and coastal actions. Sean specializes in ecological monitoring, managing special status plant and wildlife surveys and assessments, and preparing wetland determinations and mitigation plans.

After more than 30 years, John Zentner will be taking a well-deserved step back from day to day operations at the company. However, John and the staff that you have worked with will continue to provide our high quality service and we do not anticipate any changes to existing projects or contracts. Zentner Planning and Ecology will be moving confidently forward with renewed purpose and energy.

In another noteworthy change, Zentner Planning and Ecology has moved to a slightly larger space in the same Jack London Square section of Oakland. Please make note of our new address:
